Among the region's movers and shakers: Who won? Who lost?

Mary Jo Callan

The executive director of Ozone House had reason to feel upbeat June 1. That's the day her nonprofit agency, which provides housing and support services to high-risk youth, paid off the mortgage on its 1705 Washtenaw Ave. location. "We are so grateful for the tremendous support from the community toward our first-ever capital campaign," Callan said. "Paying off the mortgage not only enables us to redirect mortgage and interest payments toward services that improve the lives of young people, it also helps to ensure Ozone House's long-term sustainability as a community asset."
